Abstract

This collection consists mainly of records associated with Continental Army Quartermaster Department personnel headquartered in Carlisle, Pennsylvania during the American Revolution. Beyond the American Revolution era records, the Humer collection also includes numerous pieces of personal correspondence and business and legal records associated with two prominent individuals from 18th century Cumberland County: Samuel Postlethwaite and John Agnew.

Historical Note

During the American Revolution, the Continental Army's Quartermaster Department appointed representatives to orchestrate logistical support for military units and depot activities in Pennsylvania west of the Susquehanna River. For this area—designated as the 'Western District', John Davis, a Deputy Quartermaster General with the rank of 'Colonel,' directed operations from Carlisle. Samuel Postlethwaite, also of Carlisle, served as Davis's principal assistant. Other key district personnel included Samuel Rippey in Shippensburg and Thomas Smith in Bedford. Davis regularly reported on his activities and the status of his supplies to Department superiors in Philadelphia and to the Quartermaster General located with George Washington. Davis and his assistants handled transportation of supplies for both Continental line and militia troops from Pennsylvania and a few from Virginia and North Carolina. Transport of supplies to Fort Pitt was a major focus of their efforts, as was the delivery of arms and ammunition produced at the Carlisle Barracks and of hides and other animal parts from western Pennsylvania to Lancaster to support leather making activities directed by William Henry, Assistant Commissary General for Hides. To make these deliveries possible, Davis and his staff employed or contracted with large numbers of men to drive wagons ('wagoners' and 'wagon masters') and lead teams of packhorses and arranged for the acquisition and transport of forage for and care of the horses involved.

Most of the quartermaster records in the Humer Collection bear the name of John Davis or Samuel Postlethwaite. Davis had seen service with Pennsylvania troops at least in New Jersey in early 1777 before he received his appointment to the Quartermaster Department in May 1777. Samuel Postlethwaite, Davis's principal assistant by April 1778, was a trader, merchant and tavern keeper in Carlisle. Postlethwaite had led a militia/'associators' company from Cumberland County to New Jersey in 1776, and most recently had headed a security company assigned to protect the Carlisle barracks. Davis and Postlethwaite represented the Quartermaster Department through the end of the war. Davis died in 1784, leaving his family to face numerous debts incurred while he was quartermaster. Postlethwaite fared much better, rising to hold several public offices in Cumberland County and to become a Pennsylvania State Senator.¹

John Agnew, a Carlisle merchant, served as a Provincial Justice of the Peace from 1770, retained this position under the new Pennsylvania government and from 1777 served as Cumberland County Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions. In addition, in October 1784 he was appointed Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. Postlethwaite followed Agnew in the position of Clerk of the Cumberland County Court of Quarter Sessions and served as an executor of his estate when he died in April 1790. The appearance of the Agnew documents in this collection may thus reflect files kept by Postlethwaite for his duties as executor of Agnew's estate.

Collection Description

The bulk of the Humer Collection consists of the daily paperwork of Carlisle's Quartermaster Department's office to include requisitions, orders, receipts, accounting, reports ('returns'), and a limited amount of correspondence. As such, the collection adds detail to the existing body of knowledge about how Washington's Army was fed, clothed and moved and may provide insights about the assignments of Continental Line and Pennsylvania militia personnel. The documents also provide an extensive listing of men who served the Revolution by driving wagons and leading packhorses.

Beyond the American Revolution era records, the Humer collection also includes numerous pieces of personal correspondence and records associated with two prominent individuals from 18th century Cumberland County: Samuel Postlethwaite and John Agnew. Postlethwaite's personal papers include a list of rations supplied to his 'Flying Camp' company in August – September 1776 in Woodbridge, New Jersey; correspondence he received during the 1790s, when he was a Senator in the Pennsylvania Assembly; and a few letters from 1810, just a few months before he died. Agnew's personal papers date principally from the 1780's—although there is at least one from as early as 1747—and deal with financial and legal matters associated with his work as a Justice of the Peace and in the Cumberland County court system.

Interspersed in the collection are a few unrelated 18th and 19th century documents. Notable among these are:

-- A listing of roads in the Carlisle area dated December 9, 1789;

-- Materials related to Colonel Richard Butler. A copy of his certificate of membership in the Society of the Cincinnati dated 1785; a copy of a sketch of Butler, and a photo possibly of one of his descendants in Colorado;

--A copy of an "Iron Railroad, Canal, and Coal Map of Pennsylvania" prepared by P.S. Sheaffer, Pottsville 1867;

--A letter dated Feb 18, 1903 to R. H. Pratt, then head of the Carlisle Indian School, from Edward L. Holder, Librarian at the US Military Academy at West Point requesting information about the artillery corps at Carlisle;

--An Oath taken by Robert Jenney witnessed by Richard Peters dated January 1763. Outside says " Articles of Religion Subscribed by Rbrt {Robert} Jenney as Commissary. {Note: Jenney was rector of Christ Church in Philadelphia but died January 1762. Peters became Rector. The term "Commissary" in this context refers to a position within the Anglican Church.} ;

--A German language "Haus Calendar" for 1801 to 1900.

One or another of the previous owners of the collection organized and sub-divided its documents into categories entitled Miscellaneous Correspondence, Commissary Papers, Davis Papers, Washingtonburg, Pre-Revolution, Revolutionary War, and Post-Revolution. The collector(s) also prepared subject and name indexes for the Commissary, Davis, and Washingtonburg materials. This organization has been maintained as detailed in the folder descriptions that follow.

While at least elements of the Humer collection have been cited in 20th century works on the Revolution, this probably is the first time the materials have become available for study by the general public.² For related Pennsylvania quartermaster materials consult the Historical Society of Pennsylvania (the Hamilton Collection), the Library of Congress (the Davis papers component of the Peter Force Collection), and other collections at the Cumberland County Historical Society (the Postlethwaite Papers).
