Cumberland Pathways

Your Family Story Starts Here

The Cumberland County Historical Society, in collaboration with the Army Heritage Center, Cumberland Valley Visitors Bureau, Dickinson College and Historical Society of Pennsylvania, is planning a Genealogy Conference for October 20 - 22, 2017. Millions of Americans trace their family story to the Cumberland Valley. You can find them in the Cumberland

Valley's rich genealogical treasures. More than 250 years of social, cultural, political and military history are protected and preserved here. Our archives house documents that you will find nowhere else. CCHS, USAHEC, and Dickinson College have led the way in the digitization of family records and the creation of oral history archives.

Your family's story will come alive during Cumberland Pathways and you will leave inspired by our expert speakers and workshops. Conference topics range from preservation to using DNA to unlock your family's mysteries. CeCe Moore, Genetic Genealogist, will be the keynote speaker. Visit us at: <https://cumberlandpathways.org/>

Carlisle and Mount Holly Trolley presented by Randy Watts

Wednesday, October 4, 2017

1:30 PM

Monday, October 9, 2017

6:30 PM

The "Holly Trolley" operated from 1900 to 1930. The trolley had its ups and downs along the route and so did the company throughout its history. One of the main attractions of the Holly Trolley was the amusement park at Mount Holly. This program will cover the history of the line from its start to abandonment. It also provides an in-depth history of the park and how it changed over the years. Randy Watts, the presenter, recently published a comprehensive history of the trolley line, and his program will be of interest to anyone who has ever heard the expression "The Holly Trolley."

Cumberland Railway - Newville Trolley presented by Randy Watts

Monday, October 16, 2017

6:30 PM

Wednesday, October 18, 2017

1:30 PM

This program covers the short-lived and little known trolley line from Carlisle to Newville, known officially as the Cumberland Railway Company. The trolley operated along the Newville Road from 1910 to 1920, and even operated a trolley park near Cemetery Hill. The story of some of the people is as interesting as the trolley itself. Randy Watts recently published a book on the Newville trolley line, and this program will feature an interesting array of information from the book.

Charcoal Hearths, Collier Huts, and Haul Roads: Traces of the Iron Industry across South Mountain presented by Andre Weltman

Monday, October 30, 2017

6:30 PM

Andre Weltman, chairman of the Friends of Pine Grove Furnace State Park, will discuss the connection between the 19th century charcoal iron industry and today's South Mountain landscape. Modern trails and campsites often overlap with still-visible remnants of an important part of iron making: transforming the forests into charcoal fuel for the region's iron furnaces.

Alexander Logan, Early Settler presented by Linda Gilmore

Wednesday, November 8, 2017

1:30 PM

Travel back in time to the mid-1700s and discover the story of Alexander Logan, Cumberland Valley and Sherman's Valley settler. Linda Martin Gilmore will describe Logan's 1763 skirmish with the Indians in Sherman's Valley and the role played by the Carlisle sheriff and his party of men, found in her book Peril and Perseverance in the Pennsylvania Backcountry: Sherman's Valley, Tuscarora Valley & the Mouth of the Juniata.

FALL HISTORY SERIES

Monday, September 11, 2017 - Monday, October 2, 2017 - 6:30 - 8:30 PM

Cumberland County was founded in a violent game of empires. The Europeans that settled the county learned hard lessons from wars and revolutions, lessons that shaped county history for over a century. In a series of four presentations Jeff Wood will tell the dramatic story of the Cumberland Valley from 1730 to the eve of the Civil War. Native history, Scots-Irish and German settlement, tensions with colonial government, early national identity, the Whiskey Rebellion, and the legacy of a frontier spirit will all be woven into the story.

Jeff Wood is the owner of Whistlestop Bookshop, an independent book store founded in 1985, past-president of the Bosler Memorial Library and the Cumberland County Historical Society, and presenter of the CCHS's Fall Series since 2000. He is an adjunct instructor of American Studies at Dickinson College.

WE HIGHLY RECOMMEND REGISTERING IN ADVANCE OF THE EVENT.

Cost: $45/member; $65/nonmember; or $20 per session

CAIU ACT 48 approved; additional CAIU fee of $5 per teacher for the series.

September 11 – Captivity: Patterns developed in the encounters, clashes, and mergers of the European settlers of Cumberland Valley and the Natives of the region. Well-known and obscure captivities will be investigated for their stories, meanings, and legacies.

September 18 – Sideshow: Major John Andre of His Majesty's military in the North American colonies spent some time in the Valley as a prisoner of war in 1776. His story and the widely varying accounts of his stay here are worth re-telling.

September 25 – Is Protest Treason: The early National period in the Valley was contentious and dangerous. How did the Valley fare in the new nation? We examine patriotism and liberty after the Revolutionary War.

October 2 – The People and their Presidents: Cumberland Valley rode the whirlwind of the US Presidents from Washington to Jackson. Our relationship to the first seven Presidents is a good biography of the area's life and times.
