Foreword

The transcription of Captain Hamilton's Company Orderly Book is divided into two parts. The first part includes daily entries made, with a few exceptions, sequentially between 28 June and 24 December 1759. The second part contains several miscellaneous records entered towards the back of the book. These may have been reports—or drafts thereof—to higher headquarters accounting for personnel and equipment. Also included is a personal entry, in which Sergeant Ramsey records his enlistment in the company.

The text of the Orderly Book is transcribed as written with spelling, punctuation and capitalization as intact as can be deciphered. Uncertainties about words or phrases are indicated by brackets. [...] indicates words missing or undecipherable. Words lined out in the text are so indicated by a bracket and strikethrough symbol.

The names of nearly 100 military personnel and other individuals appear in the Orderly Book entries. The Appendix contains a listing of those men who likely were officers of the Pennsylvania Regiment, with the best estimate of their full names and date of commissioning where known.

The journal containing the records of Captain Hamilton's company also was used for several other purposes. In the years following 1759, it became a ledger of accounts payable to Samuel Ramsay, a repository for poetry, and apparently a place for penmanship practice. Subsequent entries, bearing on topics other than the French and Indian War, are not included in this transcription.

Appendix A::
Identification of Pennsylvania Provincial Officers Cited in Captain Hamilton's
Company Orderly Book

Note: Each entry below begins with the name in bold print as it appears in the Orderly Book. Variations in spelling used are shown in brackets. Unless otherwise indicated, the identifications that follow are based on a comparison of entries in the Orderly Book with muster roles and other listings contained in the Pennsylvania Archives, 5th Series, Volume 1. Even among New Levies companies, many of the officers in 1759 were veterans of previous campaigns. These citations for the most part include only the most recent commission or promotion dates found.
